A Strong Start to the New Year, Brisk Buying During the Lantern Festival

March Joint Auction Concludes with a Total Amount of Around NT$37.26 Million

The various branches of the Administrative Enforcement Agency (AEA), Ministry of Justice, held on the “first” “Tuesday” of every month, starting at “3” p.m. on March 3, 2026. Movable and immovable properties seized by the branches and district prosecutors offices were put up for auction and disposal. Coinciding with the Lantern Festival, the event drew enthusiastic participation from the public, with a total auction amount reaching NT$37,266,409. Including the luxury vehicles auctioned the previous day by the Taipei Branch upon request, the total amount reached NT$473,886,409.

The highly anticipated auction of 33 luxury vehicles seized in the “Prince Holding Group” fraud case was held by the Taipei

Branch on March 2 at the Taiwan Police College, marking the prelude to this “first” “Tuesday” of every month, starting at “3” p.m. In addition to the lively bidding on site, prosecutors and police also took the opportunity to conduct anti-fraud awareness campaigns, reminding members of the public how to avoid falling victim to scams. Among the auction items, two of the four highly sought-after supercars were successfully sold. The Porsche 918 Spyder was concluded at NT$56 million, while the Ferrari LaFerrari was concluded at NT$135 million. In total, 24 vehicles were sold, generating auction proceeds of NT$436.62 million. Combating fraud and money laundering is a key priority of the government. Through the mechanism of early-stage disposal during criminal investigations, the value of seized assets can be effectively preserved from depreciation over time, and the proceeds from auctions can be deposited into the national treasury or reserved for future restitution to victims, thereby demonstrating a concrete commitment to judicial justice. On March 3, other branches also auctioned a variety of vehicles. The Taoyuan Branch and Taichung Branch both concluded auctions of Japanese-brand SUVs. Meanwhile, a TOYOTA ALPHARD hybrid seven-seater passenger vehicle—widely regarded as a top choice among business executives—was sold by the Kaohsiung Branch for NT$1.72 million after attracting competitive bidding.

During this auction, the Shilin Branch and Hualien Branch disposed of fashion items, with various clothing pieces attracting members of the public to browse and purchase. The Pingtung Branch auctioned equipment seized in connection with violations of the Act Governing Food Safety and Sanitation, including steam boilers and stainless-steel flip tables. In addition, due to the failure of a well-known cram school operator surnamed Lin to continue making installment payments, the capital contribution of a certain company held by the guarantor was auctioned by the Yilan Branch and concluded at NT$9 million, once again demonstrating the Agency's strengthened enforcement against major debtors. In terms of real estate, two buildings and four parcels of land located in Longtan District, Taoyuan City, near Shimen Reservoir, were auctioned by the Taoyuan Branch and concluded at approximately NT$3.27 million and NT$15.58 million, respectively. A parcel of jointly owned land in Chencuoliao Section, Minxiong Township, Chiayi County, was auctioned by the Chiayi Branch and concluded at approximately NT$540,000. Land located in Dashu Township and Niaosong Township, Kaohsiung City, was auctioned by the Kaohsiung Branch and concluded at approximately NT$230,000. The joint auction achieved fruitful results, marking a strong start to the Lunar New Year in the Year of the Horse.
