

Witness the history of the enforcement system and the performance of enforcement organization

Inauguration of the first station of the traveling exhibition on the results and documents of the “Enforcement with love, Justice with no barricade” policy

The Administrative Enforcement Agency (AEA) of the Ministry of Justice (MOJ) holds in conjunction with its Shilin Branch Office a traveling exhibition on the results and documents of the “Enforcement with love, Justice with no barricade” policy. The event is inaugurated in the afternoon today at the Neihsu building of the MOJ Joint Office. The exhibition will last for three years and tour all the 13 branch offices.

The inauguration ceremony is to be presided over by AEA Director-General Chang Chin-yun. It is attended by MOJ Minister Luo Ying-shay, Vice Minister Chen Ming-tang, Prosecutor-General Wang Tien-sheng of the Taiwan High Court Prosecutors Office, Director Tsai Ching-hsiang of the MOJ Academy for the Judiciary, the then 2nd AEA Director-General Lin Chao Sung (now prosecutor of Shilin District Court Prosecutor), Head of Shilin District Court Lin Shun-yi, MOJ Agency against Corruption Director Lai Zhe-hsiang, Director of MOJ Agency of Corrections Wu Man-ying, North National Tax Bureau Director Li Ching-hua, Taipei Tax Office Vice Director Wang Chie-she, and representatives of organizations that have signed cooperation agreements with the Shilin District Court, including Dean Chen Li-tung of National Taiwan Ocean University’s College of Ocean Law and Policy and Ming Chuan University financial law Assistant Prof. Hsu Chie-si, and many other guests from judicial circles.

The inauguration ceremony is heralded by the performance of the Minghsu Primary School Band, giving the event much joyful atmosphere.

In her opening address, the soon outgoing Justice Minister Luo says humbly that she is always happy to attend an AEA event because the agency’s outstanding performance. The minister praises AEA, saying the only thing she can do is to clap hands. She says AEA has set a good example through painstaking effort to make the obligators feel convenient to pay taxes and fines. It even allows them to pay by instalment and helps them to land jobs by mobilizing social resources. To deal with notorious cases of tax in arrear, its measures win acclaims from the public, like in the cases of forcing food scandal businesses to pay, in which AEA has tried its best not to let its measures affect the wages and pensions of their workers. This policy has taken into consideration of both the exercise of public power and the interests of concerned people, hence winning many applauses. One example is the problem of illegal taxis at Taoyuan International Airport, a nagging headache of the police. After AEA takes action to clear up the tax in arrear, the problem is gone, winning the praise and appreciation from all concerned organizations. Another example is its auctions. It can stir up the atmosphere, in which teachers are seen lead their students to the scene and articles not easy to sell can be sold out at good prices. A painting by Chang Dai-chien was bid up from less than tens of thousands NT dollars to as high as 4 million, making everyone happy. A Japanese inheritor paid huge tax for a legacy he had inherited. Thanks to AEA assistance, he got a refund of more than 3 million NT dollars.

Minister Luo specifically emphasizes that she is happy with and proud of not only AEA's achievement, but also the close cooperation among MOJ organization. She is pleased to see their utmost enthusiasm and cooperation and their unity and happiness in doing their work. She says she is impressed by AEA's remarkable performance and, besides praise, she hopes this beautiful performance will go on and on. As almost all the easy cases have been solve, AEA will face greater challenges in the days ahead, but she has confidence in AEA and believes AEA can find smarter ways to make breakthroughs.

Director Chang notes that the exhibition is intended to present what AEA has done from the past to the present to enable the public know better AEA's current task and future development. The topics of systematic exhibition include the evolution of the administrative enforcement system, introduction of business management idea, compulsory enforcement of unpaid huge taxes and fines, inter-organizational win-win cooperation, history of the incentive system, creation of the luxury-ban article, promotion of small-sum payment and digitalization of enforcement orders, computerized recording, entrenchment of legal education, establishment of the culture for helping the disadvantaged and setting milestones for progress. The venue of the travelling exhibition is organized by the 13 AEA branch offices. The first exhibition is held together with the Shilin branch office and will end on July 31. After that time, it will move to other branch offices for the convenience of visitors.

At the same time, AEA has published a booklet to mark its 16th anniversary entitled "Major Event of 2-8 Years – Implementation of Barrier-free Justice." The booklet contains the complete records of AEA's history, establishment of systems, policy development, achievements and the contributions of the current and past directors-general and workers. It also include the working photos of the late MOJ Minister Chen Ting-nan and many historical documents.

This first exhibition at Shilin includes, in addition to the major historical documents, video recordings, emblematic cases, mimic situation room, inquiry room, a photo-taking area and online display. The Shilin branch office exhibits a high-value temperature-controlled wine cabinet it seized from a restaurant, a two-storey-tall bronze art structure and valuable animal specimens.

On display on the second floor, there is a picture showing a big tax evader roaming on the street, which triggered the luxury-ban article. By depriving him of his freedom, he obediently paid up the tax in arrear. There is also a story of providing timely assistance and concern to let a forlorn mother to reignite her hope of life. A visit to the exhibition will let you know what the enforcement agency has done for the nation and the community.

This first exhibition is located on the 1-2 floor of No.51 on Kangnng Road, Neihsu (site of the Shilin branch office). A visitor can get a small gift. For more details and continued enjoyment of the exhibition, you may go to watch the exhibits online at http://tpki.github.io/online_exhibition/
